

Property of Astoria Senior Center
2002 - 2003 - 2004

Last week, BRIDGET FLANAGAN, the public affairs director of Safeway's Portland Division, presented HELEN McDANIEL, president of the Astoria Senior Center, and JEAN CURRY, a center member, with Safeway gasoline coupons with a value of $600.

This is the second year that Safeway has made this contribution to the center. The contribution is used to provide fuel for the center's bus which is leased from the Sunset Empire Transit District to provide transportation for senior citizens to area grocery stores.

Unfortunately, the center is without a bus because the transmission in the old one has died. Seniors are hoping to find another bus so that this service, which is available to all Astoria area senior citizens, can be resumed.

Job Corps students liven up Astoria Senior Center

By TIMM COLLINS
The Daily Astorian

A new coat of paint can do wonders to a liven up a room.

The interior of the Astoria Senior Center was recently repainted by a crew from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, and the updated color has done wonders for the look and feel of the center, according to manager Paula Fisher.

Fisher said the center has been in need of improvements for a long time, and she had been in contact with the Job Corps for several months about the possibility of getting a crew to patch holes and do some painting.

"It really is a wonderful partnership we have with Tongue Point, because it was work experience for them and new paint for the center," she said. "I think the interaction between seniors and students from the Job Corps is beneficial for both."

Board member Don McDaniel said the Senior Center has been left a legacy, but according to stipulations of the endowment, none of the money can be used for upkeep and maintenance.

"The money is really only supposed to be used for activities," said McDaniel. "The center has to find other ways to pay for maintenance."

The interior color went from a dark pea-green to off-white that Fisher says "brightens the room and the spirits of visitors to the center."

About 15 students spent three days patching holes, prepping and painting the walls covered with siding more commonly used for exterior application.

Fisher said the Job Corps is working on updating some computer equipment at the center because the current computers are older and can't run some modern programs like e-mail or access to the Internet.

Naomi Ulsted, business and community liaison for the Job Corps center, said the service provided by students is especially helpful in times of weak economy.

"In this time of budget crunch it is important for the Job Corps to be a resource for organizations that
